

A Note on the Course Reading List

The reading list for the course which you have been provided contains a lot of excellent resources on academic writing both for your short and long-term development as writers. We would like to let you know, however, that during the course we will work mainly with the book by Swales and Feak and that it is, therefore, not necessary for you to read the other sources before the course. If you have access to the Swales and Feak book Academic Writing for Graduate Students, you may want to skim through it quickly to get an idea of its flavor. During the course, we will provide handouts from the book with exercises which we will do together. If you do not have access to that book, that is not a problem—you can still do the exercises during class. You can familiarize yourselves with the rest of the texts on the list on your own time, later. Please let us know if you have any questions.

Swales, J. M., & Feak, C. B. (2012). Academic writing for graduate students: Essential tasks and skills (3rd Ed). Ann Arbor, MI: University of Michigan Press.